

Local Impact Networks

Community Partners Working Together to Achieve Health Equity

Local Impact Networks (LINs) link committed community partners who blend resources to improve oral health for those in the community who need it most. LINs focus on addressing factors that influence oral health including disease prevention, access to dental care, and healthy behaviors. The goal is to make measurable progress toward oral health equity in five to eight years by creating a sustainable network of resources.

Here's how Local Impact Networks work:

1. Arcora Foundation partners with a local organization to coordinate the LIN, including cultivating partners to lead anchor strategies like the ones listed here.
2. Arcora Foundation provides start-up funding for the backbone, evaluation, and project work.
3. The LIN develops creative approaches to reduce barriers and coordinate access to care.
4. The LIN engages clinical experts, policy advisors, and local funders to scale the work and develop sustainability plans.

LIN communities are selected based on the following:

- ✓ Burden of disease and with the best opportunity for improvement.
- ✓ Significant access-to-care inequities.
- ✓ Local partners committed to improving access, increasing prevention and transforming systems of care, leading to better oral health.
- ✓ Aligned regional assets, such as an Accountable Community of Health (ACH).

Arcora Foundation-sponsored LINs leverage local expertise and focus on approaches most likely to achieve lasting change. Currently, LINs are operating in the North Sound region and Spokane and Pierce Counties.
